Listen to a piece of music.

Can you create an artwork to reflect the music?

Think about:

- the mood of the music (happy, sad etc.)
- the story told by the music (can you picture any characters? Does the music take you on a journey?)
- any places the music reminds you of (does it remind you of a stormy sea, a peaceful meadow, a busy town etc.?)

Compose a new song.

You could:

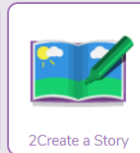

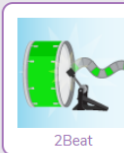

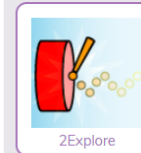

- rewrite the lyrics of a song you already know.
You could make up lyrics your current learning topics, or about one of your own interests.
- turn a poem you know into a song by composing a tune to fit with the words

Music and Sound:

Listen to a new piece of music and tell someone or write down what you notice. Try to explain your ideas as clearly as you can, thinking about how you can describe the sounds you hear, how makes you feel, and whether it reminds you of any other music you know.

Challenge: use some technical musical language, ambitious adjectives or similes in your description.

Use instruments, your voice or objects around the house to compose a film soundtrack by creating sound effects and tunes to match the events and mood of a film. You could create your own short film first if you have access to a camera, or ask an adult to help you find an appropriate film on the TV or online and turn the volume off so that you can replace the original sound track with your own.

Where to find new music to explore and/or use for activities

We are lucky to live in a time where there is a huge amount of music available to listen to online, and you might also have some recordings at home.

Here are some suggestions of where you could look for new pieces of music to explore. Don't forget you could also ask someone at home or other friends and family for recommendations!
